

Unsafe Scaffolding Puts Workers in Danger

A routine inspection by a Health and Safety executive found an employee working unsafely on scaffolding.

The inspection discovered that employees of Shane Homes Limited were using scaffolding with no edge protection. The edge protection was necessary to protect employees from a 4 metre fall from the first floor. It was also found that the access ladder was the wrong size and not securely fastened.

Shane Holmes Limited were fined £1000 and ordered to pay £799 costs after pleading guilty to a breach of Regulation 6(3) of the Work at Height Regulations 2005.

If you have had an accident whilst at work and it was not your fault, it is important that you take legal advice at the earliest opportunity.

If you think you may have a claim, contact our specialist personal injury lawyers for immediate advice. Call Actons Solicitors free on 08081 355 355 or click here to start your claim now.